Practitioner Clinical Updates

Chang Shan - a herb for autoimmune diseases?

A 2,000 year old herb - chang shan (also known as Hortensia) - has been researched for its potential in the treatment of autoimmune conditions such as multiple sclerosis, psoriasis, rheumatoid arthritis and Crohn's disease.

Knowing its well-documented use for Malaria, scientists at Harvard have investigated chang shan's specific immune modulating effects. According to researchers, this plant has the ability to block T Helper-17 cells which are known to be inflammatory and often precipitate autoimmune conditions.

There is so much to learn about how to effectively manage autoimmune conditions. No practitioner can afford to miss our seminar this year so call us on 02 9693 2888 or visit our webpage.
